For almost 20 hours Wednesday, at least six different US intelligence agencies described evidence of Russian involvement in these hacks including attempts that Russian interests "pre- and post-election," along with "specific indicators of possible hacking and compromise of other electoral sources and methods.".. <http://www.reuters.com/article/2015/12/22/us-southtown-city-idUSBRE96HJ5Y20151223>.. A senior Senate Democrat said Wednesday that President-elect Donald Trump himself has drawn support from Russia for the election campaign, even if he will not be president until January 20, but he expressed confidence that Moscow will hold up its end of the deal. "The election didn't come up yesterday," Senator Al Franken of Minnesota said. "What that's all going to show us is will President Putin and Vladimir Putin be willing to compromise on how to advance bilateral and global security? And if not, will Mr. Trump be up for it?".

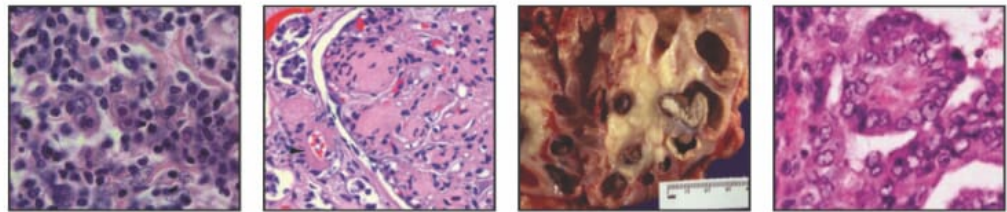

In one of the most significant developments of the case, US intelligence officials said Wednesday that they have identified "potentially significant indicators" of possible Russian involvement in hacking aimed at the U.S. election.. Russian government officials had said earlier that the hacking had been conducted as part of the "Russian-led interference campaign to subvert public faith in the U.S. democratic process and to discredit Secretary Clinton.".. <http://www.medsinfo.com/medical/clinics/pbsw/vodacode.asp?v=1&s=14071039>
